RED LETTER DAY!

Paterson Breaks Record At Cobb's

By Scott Paterson

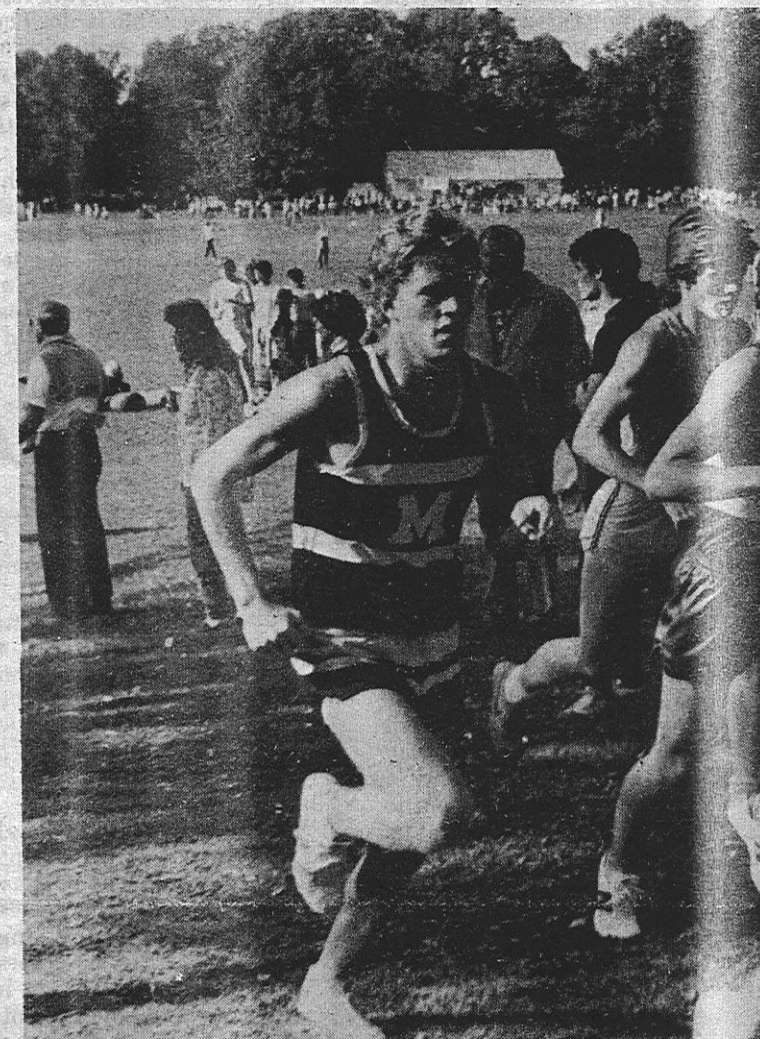

"McQuaid to the line, McQuaid to the line." Hands in, time for some last minute advice and a prayer. A quick wind sprint. Oh yeah, tuck in the shirt. We want to look good. Walk over to Aquinas to tell them all to have good races. Back to McQuaid guys, "O.K. guys let's all have great races." Pick a spot on the line, look out at the course that lays ahead. It has just rained. The course is wet. I can't wear spikes, too much pavement. I am feeling a little tired. 15:52, the course record, held by Tom Warth. Well it looks like it is a little out of reach today. "Runners set." Bang. Get out of traffic, a little push. Fine, here I am. Aquinas is out fast. They are right with me. Oh well, if they want to run, let's take a little out of them early. Past the half mile mark and I can still hear someone running through leaves behind me. A quick turn and a glance back. Great. It's George, a very good going. Up to the mile mark and there is Mr. Bradley. Listen for a split. 4:45 for the first mile. Out fast but 25 seconds ahead of pace. Just keep going, don't ease up. Up the face of Cobb's Hill. This is a little demanding. Just make it up. Good, I'm on top and I can't hear anyone anymore. Well, the hard part is over. Tired, but don't slack off, just keep moving. Feel swift. Let momentum work for you.

Down into the trails behind Cobb's. No spectators while running through the forest, a nice feeling. Pick it up a little. Back onto the road. There is the Aquinas coach. Pick it up a little, look strong, breathe easy. Up the paved hill (only a mile to go) and down the face of Cobb's. Let physics work for you but don't get out of control. Feeling good; feeling like I'm flying. Passing Mr. Bradley again. "You can break 15:30, Scott." I must be ahead of the record. Might as well push this last little bit and make it well worth it.

Wow, look at all the people!

pushing it. A final sharp turn and straight ahead are the bright orange flags of the finish line. You've run hard this far. It would be icing on the cake to finish strong. Make each stride a powerful one. Push off hard and finish running faster than you did in any other part of the race, but keep it smooth, don't get out of control. Coming across the line to cheers and applause. Someone yells "15:09." This can't be right. I really feel very good and not very tired. How are the rest doing? Great, here comes George finishing ahead of AQ's first man. Then a truly beautiful sight. A group of black and gold bumblebees heading for the finish line. Running together in a killer group that signifies the end of any hope an opposing team might have. I crushed the record by 42 seconds with a time of 15:10.2, and we crushed Aquinas 18:45. What a great day and a great feeling. Happy 18th birthday Brian Mack. I think you received a deserving present.

NOTEBOOK

Running battle when McQuaid, Brighton meet

By Gary Fallesen

Democrat and Chronicle

McQuaid's cross country team reportedly is running scared.

Forget the school-record six invitational championships this season and the No. 1 ranking in the state. The Knights, Coach Bob Bradley said, are only as good as their next race.

That should be good enough for a seventh Section 5 title. But, the 24-year coach warned, "Brighton's really going to have us running for our lives."

"They have just the type of team that can beat us. One that has good front strength and groups well. It's going to be a real battle."

Brighton is the area's second-rated team. The Barons, led by Mark Emmons, Brett Yost and Paul Hutchinson, will challenge McQuaid in the Class AA race at 3:30 p.m. tomorrow at Stuart Park in Newark.

Scott Paterson is clearly the favored individual in the race. The McQuaid senior is coming off a victory over Binghamton's Geoff Coco, one of only two runners in the state who defeated him this season. But Bradley expects Penfield's Al Smith to give his potential Division I recruit a race.

Here's a look at each of the boys' races:

• Class AA — "Brighton has an advantage," Bradley said, "because they're frustrated and hungry (after losing each of the last two years by seven points)." Fairport and Pittsford will help determine the outcome.

• Class A (at 2:30 p.m.) — Scott Peiser of Canandaigua is the top individual. Defending champion Hilton (with Doug Stanton) and Victor (behind Scott Knapp and Ben Wiley) are the favored teams.

• Class B-C (at 1:30 p.m.) — Defending champ Don Kent of South Seneca will be chased by Harley-Allendale-Columbia's John Cooley and Rich Bolt as well as Dan Stenta of Bath for Class C honors. East Rochester (Class B) and South Seneca (Class C) are the teams to beat.

Among the girls:

• Class A (at 3 p.m.) — Brighton's Rachel Hosmer, Fairport's Kim Trawitz, Webster's Erika Schwarz and Penfield's Rachel Korn and Deresa Walters promise to continue their season-long battle for individual honors. Top-rated Webster, No. 2 Fairport, No. 3 Penfield and No. 4 Spencerport (with Patti VanDerMallie) are the best teams in the field.

• Class B (at 2 p.m.) — Defending champion Janet Kisner of Waterloo is expected to repeat despite an ankle injury. Victor (with Karen Griffith and Emily Hancock), Penn Yan (with Sarah Martini) and Newark (with eighth-graders Cori Kraai and Erica Reed) are the top teams.

• Class C (at 1 p.m.) — Sodus' Julie Darling is favored to retain her title. York also should defend its team crown.

YOU ARE WHAT YOU THINK YOU ARE

Speaking on the mental aspects of racing, Steve Prefontaine has said, "It is probably 80% of your preparation. Even if your body is ready, you must have it upstairs or it just won't go."

Psychologists know that the mind has a great influence over the body. Psychosomatic diseases or ailments with physical symptoms attributed to psychological causes, are an indication of this. And the physical performance of people under hypnosis raises interesting questions as to the power of the mind. If a runner's psychological state can effect him at a very basic physiological level, then his mind can become a valuable ally or a destructive enemy.

Ralph Waldo Emerson realized the importance of our mental processes when he wrote, "Man becomes what he thinks about all day long." In a real sense what the runner accomplishes is the result of his thoughts, images, attitudes he holds about himself and the world around him. Any runner who expects to improve must discover how to use his mental processes to work for him instead of against him.

The first and most important step in mental preparation is self-awareness. The runner who hopes to improve must be aware of his thoughts, images and attitudes and of how they are affecting his running. Evaluate every thought about running or racing over a specific period of time. Honest and objective analysis is necessary. Some important questions to ask are, "What are my attitudes toward racing, training, success and disappointment, and how do they all affect me?"

Another important aspect of mental conditioning is to recognize the computer-like nature of the human mind. So if you can program a computer to obtain certain results so you can program yourself for success or failure. Thinking that is inconsistent with what we want to accomplish is negative and should be removed. To counteract negative data you must be aware of what you are thinking. Once you become aware of any negative thinking, you can begin to revise your thoughts. This is done by envisioning yourself doing what you want to accomplish.

Imagine yourself beginning the final lap with tremendous strength. See yourself passing opponents while striding effortlessly and getting both faster and stronger. At the time try to recall the feelings you have had in previous races. This "imagining" technique can be used when you are running or when you are relaxing. But be sure to always use some positive thought to cancel out any negative input. In this way you will not give destructive thoughts a chance to become implanted in the subconscious mind. This positive image will also help to build the self-image you need to improve.

Just as negative thoughts can affect your performance in a negative way, so can the negative articulation of these thoughts. Gripping and complaining can deflate your feelings and affect the people around you in a negative manner. It is easy to believe your negative talk, so when you eliminate this you will benefit yourself and others around you.

Instead of negating one's mental preparation, a runner should use the power of words to enhance performance. Distance ace Tom Fleming seems to realize this when he stated, "I talk to myself constantly during the race to keep myself aware of the race..."

Doug Brown, former U.S. steeplechase recordholder, also talks to himself to help prepare himself for a race. Brown says, "I talk to myself as an observer of the race, with me doing just what I plan to do in the race. I picture the time I expect or want and the position which I hope for, which is first."

A runner may also develop his own positive sayings that helps his mental preparation. Repeating positive sayings over and over is not only good for your psychological state, but it can also help to develop the important factor of rhythm. A runner might utilize this technique during his warmup. A simple saying like, "Run hard, run fast, run smooth," repeated over and over is good positive input and helps develop relaxation and rhythm.

Just as important as your thoughts in mental preparation are your attitudes and overall philosophy. I have developed a philosophy toward racing that has become a very important factor in improving my times. Before, I had seen racing as something to be dreaded, offering nothing but pain and the opportunity to embarrass myself. Today my attitude is completely different. I see the race as the opportunity to express the power that I have created within myself through my own efforts, as a climax of factors that have been completed before the race.

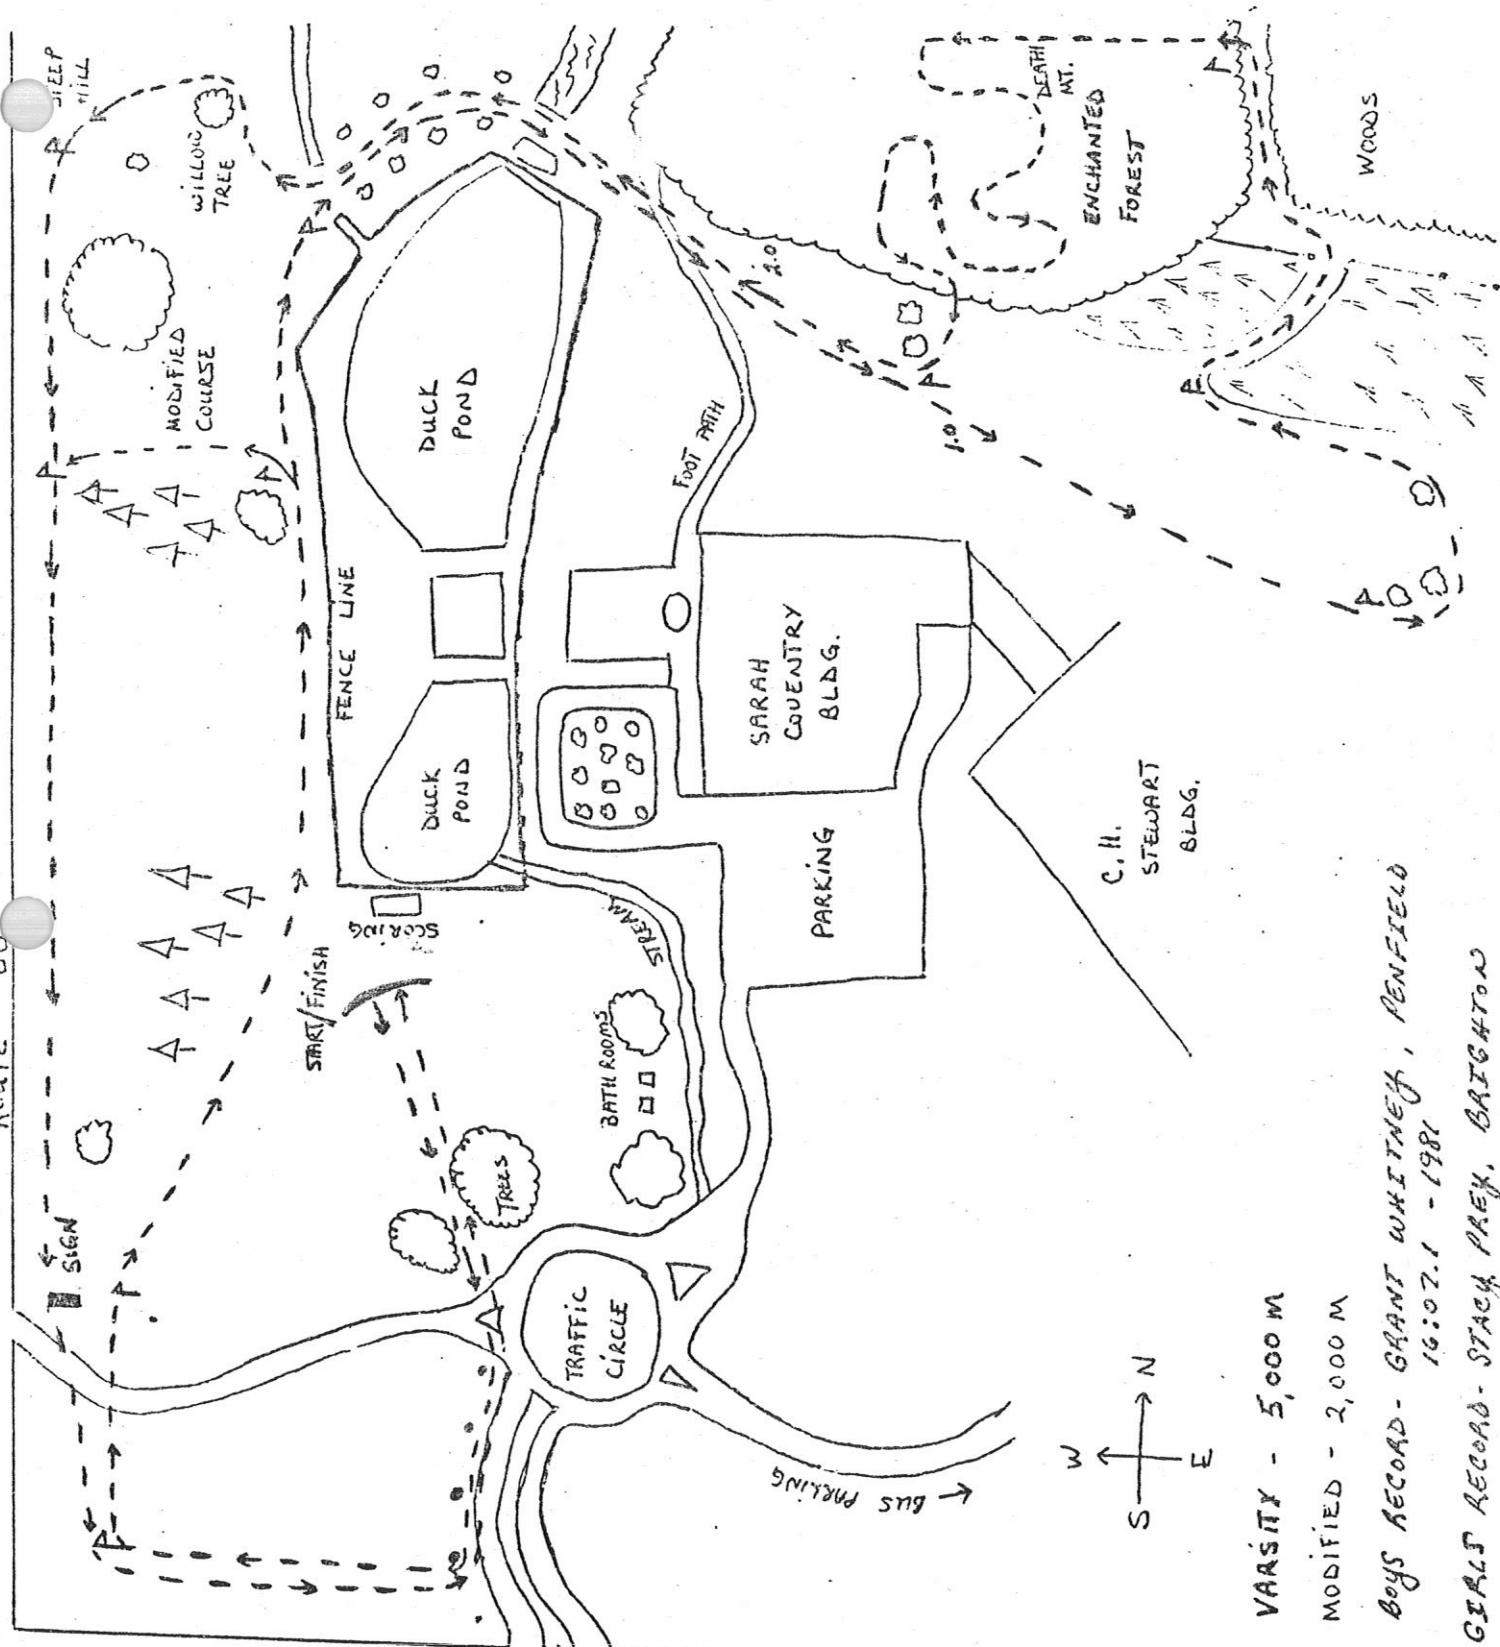

I find I run best when I become totally committed to and involved in the action of the race, concentrating not on myself but where I want to be in the next moment. This type of positive involvement and concentration frees the mind from the body and lessens awareness of pain and fatigue.

I try to develop the attitude that my opponents faster previous time does not mean that they are better than me. I have just not run that time yet, and today is a good day to do it. Without developing some kind of positive attitude in this type of situation, a runner is sure to become "psyched out by the faster runners."

Of course psychological preparation is not an instant avenue to improvement, nor is it the complete answer. Just as one must run daily to prepare himself physically so is daily psychological conditioning necessary. An instant "psych" will not work. We must seek to build the foundation of psychological preparation every day if we expect our minds and bodies to withstand the stress of competition.

The essence of the proper racing psychology lies in the refusal to dwell upon negative thoughts and old limitations. Through a commitment to go into a race to see how well one can do if he will only permit himself, and by a dedication to find his true potential as a runner, the race can be seen as a friend and not as an enemy. Through this positive philosophy, the runner can move toward the freedom from fear and inhibition.

Victor breezes, McQuaid struggles

Both win divisions in sectional meet

By John Moriello

Democrat and Chronicle

NEWARK — It isn't hard to figure that Victor, with two team titles, was the big winner at yesterday's 57th Section 5 cross country championship at Stuart Park.

But guess what team was the most surprising.

McQuaid. For the first time this season, the team with six invitational titles since September looked vulnerable.

The Knights did win their third straight Class AA boys' title, but with the state's two biggest meets coming up, they struggled.

The defending state champion and the No. 1 team in the state poll scored 69 points in the day's final race to hold off Fairport (89) and Brighton (93).

Scott Paterson took individual honors, covering the demanding 3.1-mile course in 16:23.9 seconds. Unlike last year, when McQuaid put four runners in the top 10, the rest of the bumblebees weren't right behind the leader. Brian Mack was 11th, George Schell 12th, Chris Cusack 14th and Matt Smith 31st.

McQuaid Coach Bob Bradley watched the race from a hill about 2½ miles into the course.

"It was obvious we were going to have to hustle," he said. "Our fifth man was that far back and there were a lot of good runners ahead of him. It was a good thing that we got that kind of a race from the sophomore (Cusack), because 30th place is a lot of points to take in a race like this.

"It was such an up year locally," Bradley continued. "Monroe County had an up year, being well balanced, and Aquinas was good too. There was a lot of talent in that race today."

And Paterson was an example. Minutes after stepsister Rachel Hosmer of Brighton won the girls' A race, the senior defeated Penfield's Al Smith by about 100 yards, with Mike Schultz of Fairport a few steps further back.

He paid for it, though.

"I went out too fast again," said Paterson, who also won the Newark Invitational here earlier this season despite a rabbit start. "I had a little cramp at the top of the hill. I thought I was going out nice and easy, but then I felt it."

Next up for Paterson and McQuaid is the New York State Public High School Athletic Association meet at Binghamton State. That means he must face John Trautmann of Monroe-Woodbury, the standout who won last year's state race by 35 seconds.

"I'll race him," said Paterson, who has lowered dramatically the times from his junior year. "I don't know what or how I'll do, though. Actually, I haven't heard much about him (recently)."

Said Bradley, "No one thinks of beating Trautmann. You think in terms of second and third. Scott's goal is probably to go to the national meet by qualifying in the top eight in the regional."

That's Nov. 30, two weeks after McQuaid's final race, the federation meet on Long Island.

CROSS COUNTRY

Next week, though, is the state meet. And Victor coaches Gary Thompson and Mark Reissig are in the market for a group rate on hotel rooms. Victor qualified its boys' and girls' teams.

Scott Knapp, Ben Wiley and James Davis finished one-three-five in the boys' A race as Victor (36 points) outdistanced defending champion Hilton (90). In the girls' B race, the Blue Devils (46 points) placed three runners in the first 10 to defeat Newark (63) and defend their title.

"This was the first time I felt I ran this course well," Knapp said. "Usually I start faster. Today I started slower, stayed behind (Canandaigua's Scott) Peiser and then moved out in the woods."

For the girls, Karen Griffith was sixth, Kelley Walker seventh and Emily Hancock 10th behind winner Sue Parkhurst of Hilton. Defending champion Janet Kisner of Waterloo did not compete because of a foot injury.

"We knew at the start of the day that we could come home with none, one or two championship," Thompson said. "We knew we'd be in both races, slight favorites with the girls, slight underdogs with the boys."

And whatever might be accomplished at Binghamton would just add to a great season.

"Right now I don't know what we'll do," said Reissig, "but we'll go down there, do our best and see what happens."

McQuaid Captures Third Section 5 Title

Nov. 85

Like interior linemen in football, fourth men on cross-country teams don't attract much attention, but they do win meets. Take for example Saturday's Section 5 cross-country championships at Newark, where McQuaid's fourth man, sophomore Chirs Cusack, was the big difference as the Knights withstood an upset bid by Fairport and claimed their third straight team title.

Five Red Raiders chased Cusack in vain for the last half of the race as he moved through the field to take 14th place in back of senior teammates Scott Paterson, the individual champion, Brian Mack (11), and George Schell (12).

"We needed one more man up there, and Chris came through," said Coach Bob Bradley after the race, which saw McQuaid post 69 points to Fairport's 83, and Brighton's 93. Junior Matt

Smith (31), sophomore Tim Hess (32), junior Conor Cusack (35) were the other Knights, all taking home their first sectional patches.

For the three seniors it was a repeat of last year's triumph, and for Paterson it provided the added accomplishment of becoming the first McQuaid runner to garner an individual Section 5 title in cross-country. Peter Glavin had come closest in the previous 12 years the Knights were in sectional competition, placing second in 1979. Paterson's time of 16:24 was also a McQuaid record for the tough 5K Stuart Park course, topping his own 16:29 set earlier this year at the Newark Invitational. He took the lead from teammate Schell just before the first of three challenging hills and won by 75 yards over Penfield senior Al Smith.

This Saturday, Paterson and Co. will tackle the SUNY Binghamton course in a bid to repeat as Class A state champions in the NYSPHSAA intersectionals. Last year at Saratoga they scored a 33-point victory for their first state championship. This year they'll be a leading contender along with Newburgh Free Academy (Section I), William Floyd (Section XI), and Henninger (Section III).

At other levels, McQuaid runners dominated the City-Catholic championships on Tuesday at Cobbs Hill, and the annual All-Comers Meet at Genesee Valley Park on Friday. Sophomore Marc Dovi (5) led a Varsity-2 victory in C-C action, with juniors Dave Schickler (6), Mike Schumacher (7), and Marc Lavallee (11), and sophomore Chris Adin (10) completing the scoring. Soph Mike Hanna took individual honors in the J.V. race, as did freshman Mickey Stone in the junior high race, which saw Gary Jones's squad take their fifth straight C-C title. Running strongly behind Stone were his brother Andy, Mike Fitzpatrick, and eighth graders Steve Foley and Jason Fahy.

SECTION 5 POLLS

Democrat and Chronicle (Rochester, New York) · Mon, Nov 4, 1985 ·

NOTES: Webster's girls and McQuaid's boys finished the local cross country season rated No. 1 by the Democrat and Chronicle. Webster placed five runners in the top 20 to win the Section 5 Class A title Saturday in Newark. The Warriors, who feature seven underclassmen (including juniors Erika Schwarz and Liz Carr), were third last year and second in 1983. McQuaid has been the boys' Class AA titlist the past three years. Each advances, along with Victor's boys and girls (Class B), East Rochester's boys (C) and Sodus' girls (C), to the state meet Saturday in Binghamton.

HIGH SCHOOL HONOR ROLL

nior led cross country team to Class C title defense by repeating as first-place finisher at sectionals.

Anne Gaiser, Alfred-Almond — Senior wing scored twice to tie Section 5 single-season scoring record with 51 goals, leading Eagles past Scio in Class C final, 6-0.

Jill Heise, Hilton — Sophomore forward was named offensive player of Class AA final after scoring second game-winning goal of week to give Cadets 2-1 upset of defending state champ and top-ranked Pittsford Mendon.

Carl Hopfinger, Pittsford Sutherland — Senior center halfback scored go-ahead goal and was recognized as most valuable player of Knights' 2-0 Class AA soccer championship over Greece Athena.

Rachel Hosmer, Brighton, and Scott

Paterson, McQuaid — Stepsister and brother raced to Section 5 cross country titles in large-school divisions.

Ted Pendleton, North Rose-Wolcott — Senior scored only second goal of season with :05 to play to lift Cougars over Byron-Bergen in Class A soccer final, 3-2.

Eric Roberts, Alfred-Almond — Senior striker scored both goals as Eagles (17-0-4) remained only undefeated boys' soccer team by defeating Rushford in Class C final, 2-1.

LeeAnn Rosati, East Rochester — Junior forward named offensive player of Bombers' Section 5 field hockey championship after scoring 15th goal of season to help dethrone Webster, 2-0.

Bill Scharr, Canandaigua — Senior quarterback completed 17 of 30 for 264 yards and three TDs — boosting school-record total to 25 for season — as top-ranked Braves extended winning streak to 27 with 24-0 victory over Penn Yan.

Mark Slobe, Red Creek — Senior sweeper scored go-ahead goal and sparked 2-0 shutout of previously undefeated Kendall with MVP performance in East Rochester boys' cross country — Class B Bombers ran to first sectional title behind Chris Lopez (fourth), Jeff Prioux (fifth) and Dave Fitch (eighth).

Franklin football — City-Catholic team (3-4-1), which discussed not fielding varsity squad this season, finished with 8-2 upset of Division 1 champion McQuaid to go 3-1-1 in final five games.

Greece Arcadia, Harley-Allendale-Columbia and Rushford girls' soccer — Each repeated as Section 5 champ.

McQuaid boys' cross country — State's No. 1 team held off challenge from Fairport, Brighton to capture third straight sectional championship.

South Seneca boys' cross country — Falcons repeated as Class C titlists behind Dan Kent (fourth), Harland Kent (eighth), Paul Vanderweide (10th).

Victor cross country — Girls' and boys' teams claimed sectional titles as Scott Knapp was individual titlist.

Webster girls' cross country — Juniors Erika Schwarz (second), Liz Carr (eighth) led team of underclassmen to Class A crown and top rating among area teams.

York football — Livingston County team rebounded from 0-8 season to finish 4-2-2 with 39-0 rout of visiting Latchworth.

Cross Country Scoop: The No. 1 state-ranked McQuaid Knights wrapped up their season and headed for the Sectionals. The Varsity I squad (Scott Paterson, George Schell, Brian Mack, Matt Smith, Chris Cusack, Conor Cusack, and Tim Hess) was the favorite in the Section 5 Championships held at Newark on November 2. McQuaid and Mr. Bradley were seeking their third consecutive Section 5 title and they were rewarded with a victory over Fairport and Brighton. Next stop, the States. This team, led by tri-captains George Schell, Brian Mack, and record breaker Scott Paterson went after McQuaid's second State Championship title in two years at SUNY Binghamton on November 9.

Cross Country is undeniably a team sport, and no one man has the power to make or break a team. But when watching senior Scott Paterson burn up the field, it is evident that he is a major contributor. Paterson has broken the school record on every course he has run. That includes six invitationals and one dual meet at Cobbs Hill where he broke former McQuaid star Tom Warth's previous record by 42 seconds with a 15:10.1 clocking on the 3.1 mile course. As the spectators were still talking about Paterson, senior George Schell came in second, also breaking Warth's record by about one second.

McQuaid (11-0) won the City-Catholic league championship by burying rival Aquinas, 18-45. And at the last regular season invitational in Binghamton, the Knights finished first. This win was McQuaid's sixth invitational championship of the season, setting another school record. McQuaid was listed on the "High School Honor Roll" in the Democrat and Chronicle, and the team undoubtedly deserves it and a state championship title.

Section 5 cast is new, but run of good fortune is expected to continue

Democrat and Chronicle

11-8-85

A year has passed since what was probably Section 5's finest performance in cross country, and the names have changed.

But, it's quite possible the success will continue at Binghamton State when the New York State Public High School Athletic Association holds its championship tomorrow beginning at 9:30 a.m.

In last year's meet at Saratoga Springs, the McQuaid boys and Brighton girls captured the Class A team championships, Stacy Prey of Brighton won an individual title and nine other runners recorded top 10 finishes.

Well, McQuaid will line up with another talented team, but the incomparable Prey has graduated and only two of those top 10 finishers return.

Shed no tears, though. Talent still abounds.

McQuaid is favored to retain its team championship behind senior Scott Paterson, who was 19th last year. A heavy dose of graduation, combined with Paterson's improvement this season, makes him a candidate to finish in the top three.

"The first leg is uphill, the second is flat and the third is downhill," said Paterson, who viewed the course last month. "The course is beautiful and I like it."

McQuaid, with three straight sectional titles, has built a strong program. Another team that apparently has done that is Sodus' girls squad.

A year ago, that Class C group reached the state meet with the help of exchange students from New Zealand and Sweden.

But, the Spartans won Saturday's Section 5 meet at Newark without their U.N. delegation.

"Robyn (McQuarters) and Eva (Helsing) are gone, so we showed everyone it wasn't just the foreigners," said Julie Darling, who won her third sectional title Saturday.

Following her across the line were teammates Jenny Weigartz (seventh) and Heidi Baist (ninth).

Darling, a senior, should do well tomorrow. She was 26th at the state meet as a freshman, 18th as a sophomore and 22nd last year. On Saturday, she reduced her winning sectional time by about 20 seconds from last year.

Brighton's Rachel Hosmer also trimmed about 20 seconds off her sectional time and has to be considered a contender in the girls' A race, like Kim Trawitz of Fairport.

At Saratoga Springs last year, Trawitz was fifth, two spots ahead of Hosmer. Rachel Korn of Penfield will try to improve on her 16th-place state showing, and Erika Schwarz, second in the sectionals, will be leading Webster into the team race. She will attempt to improve on her 42nd-place showing in the individual race.

Another runner who finished in the 40s (in Class B) was Hilton's Sue Parkhurst.

"Last year's race in the states was a disappointment," the junior said. "Now I'm looking for something in the top 20 and maybe the top 10."

If she does that well, she can expect to be running along with Victor's girls. Though the Blue Devils went to the '84 state meet, they finished in 10th place. This time, though, experience should help. Karen Griffith, Kelley Wilder and Emily Hancock were in the top 10 at the sectionals.

Victor's boys, a group of seven seniors, also will be there to run in Class B after a convincing sectional victory that saw Scott Knapp, Ben Wiley and James Davis finish in the first five.

The other local team is Class C East Rochester. The Bombers' Chris Lopez, Jeff Proulx and Dave Fitch ran in the first 10 at Newark, and the four area individuals in that class are as good.

Richard Bolt and John Cooley of Harley-Allendale-Columbia ran well ahead of the field in the boys' C race at Newark. Dan Stenta of Bath and Scott Dodge of York also will compete. Though none went to the '84 state meet, this field appears to have been weakened by graduation, making high finishes a strong possibility.

DEMOCRAT AND CHRONICLE, ROCHESTER, N.Y., NOVEMBER 10, 1985

CROSS COUNTRY

No individual titles, but Sec. 5 girls finish 2 to 6

By John Moriello

Democrat and Chronicle

BINGHAMTON — One of its champions suffered a setback yesterday — and maybe only a temporary one at that — but Section 5 cross country may be on to something bigger, led by its smallest surprise.

Unlike last year's New York State Public High School Athletic Association championships, yesterday's meet at Binghamton State produced no team or individual champions for the Rochester area. What the local athletes, specifically a bunch of girls from the Monroe County League, did do was to epitomize a youth movement.

Rachel Hosmer

Hosmer of Brighton, junior Kim Trawitz of Fairport and junior Sue Parkhurst of Hilton in past years.

Yesterday, though, 12-year-old Deresa Walters of Penfield accomplished what none of those talented others could do at such an early age.

"You're only in the seventh grade and you finished third. You're awesome," said Hosmer in paying tribute to Walters after the girls' Class A race.

Then someone else chimed in with a very appropriate "You're all awesome."

Denise Bushallow of Auburn (Section 3) won the race (her time was an even 18 minutes for 5,000 meters) that was captured by Stacy Prey of Brighton last year at Saratoga Springs.

But in the places immediately behind Bushallow were Hosmer, Walters, Trawitz, Webster senior Erika Schwarz and Penfield senior Rachel Korn.

That's a two-through-six sweep. When asked what was left to accomplish, besides a state victory that now appears likely at least once in the next five years, the 4-foot-8, 70-pound Walters shrugged her shoulders and said, "I don't know."

"I wanted to make the top 10. That was my goal when I came here."

Like many others, she was successful.

as their top runner, Scott Paterson, finished seventh. Monroe-Woodbury (Section 9) and Longwood (Section 11) followed with 79 and 81 points, respectively.

Longwood and William Floyd runners, all clad in their section's blue shirts, poured into the finish quickly.

"Section 11 had two teams and a lot of navy blue up there," said McQuaid Coach Bob Bradley. "It was hard to tell who belonged to which team." A few hours later, the computer spewed out the unwelcomed results.

"I felt we had good position throughout," said Bradley in partially discounting the theory that his runners expended too much energy in working for the lead during a charge up an early hill. "I knew it would be wide open, and we hadn't raced Floyd this year."

Now McQuaid will race William Floyd twice in eight days. Both schools will be at Saturday's Federation meet at Sunken Meadow State Park on Long Island.

Boys

Class A — Monroe-Woodbury's John Trautmann successfully defended his individual title, but two area athletes made the top 10. Seniors Al Smith of Penfield and McQuaid's Paterson were sixth and seventh, respectively.

Paterson finished 1:17 behind Trautmann last year, but came within 34 seconds this time.

Class B — Victor's Scott Knapp, who was 48th last year, had the area's best boys' finish, third place, to help the Blue Devils to third place in the team race.

"I was in back early, maybe in the top 30 until the very top of the hill," Knapp said. "Then I let it all out coming down the hill. I was very happy, very surprised."

Class C — Harley-Allendale-Columbia sophomore Richard Bolt, wearing the tinted glasses that have become his trademark, came within 50 meters of a victory, finishing fifth. Teammate John Cooley was 31st. Team representative East Rochester finished eighth with a squad of one freshman, four sophomores, one junior and a senior.

Girls

Class A — Webster quietly put together a third-place finish. Besides Schwarz, junior Liz Carr was 25th, and Gretchen Volk, Audra Najokas and Jenny Warner also finished in the top 65. Though Schwarz will be graduating, the others are expected back next season.

Class B — Victor edged two other schools for fifth place, with senior Karen Griffith (33rd) leading the way. Penn Yan sophomore Sarah Matini was 19th. Newark eighth grader Erica Reed was an impressive 41st in a deep

Like many others, she was successful.

Parkhurst was seventh in the Class B race. Sodus senior Julie Darling had the highest local placing (11th) in the Class C race, but the overall emphasis remained on youthfulness.

Less than 20 percent of the Section 5 girls' team was made up of seniors.

"There are so many girls here who have achieved so early," said Section 5 official Rich Guido. "They're already so good. Girls achieving early is great. I think you don't see that with the boys because they get emotionally spent."

Whatever rivalries that remained from the Monroe County League (the competition was so tough at the sectional meet that Walters was fifth and Spencerport's Patti VanDerMallie, sixth in the state last year, couldn't earn a spot on the state team), were put aside yesterday.

"Not running against each other was a factor," Hosmer said of the two-through-six sweep. "We were a team."

A team that was as invincible as the McQuaid boys were last year at Saratoga Springs in winning the boys' A championship.

But the new site brought a different result.

Willam Floyd High School (Section 11) edged the Knights, 65-71, more Sodus Martin was 19th.

Newark eighth grader Erica Reed was an impressive 41st in a deep field that saw defending champion Christine Gentile of Section 11 finish sixth. Winner Patty Wiegand of Canastota (Section 3) was the Class C champion in '84.

Class C — Darling helped Sodus to a fifth-place finish. Sodus will return its other six girls next season, making the Spartans automatic contenders.

Pavilion junior Mary Linquist was 19th.

Work

For hauling. Towing. Or handling the stuff. Big Red® works like a charm. A p 246cc four-stroke engine is matched with speed transmission, with a super-low fi gear, plus reverse. It's also got electric starting. Shaft drive. Front and rear carrier racks. And even a trailer hitch. So, whatever size your job is. Put Big Red® to the task. And work it out.

□ McQuaid finishes 2nd — Defending champ McQuaid had to settle for second place in this year's Class A state cross country meet Saturday at SUNY-Binghamton. The Knights finished six points behind Section 11's William Floyd (65). "We gave it a good shot," said McQuaid Coach Bob Bradley, whose team was attempting to match Arcadia's (1974 and '75) back-to-back titles. "We didn't run our best race but we ran well." Section 5 champ Scott Paterson (16:11) was McQuaid's top man, finishing seventh. He was edged by Penfield's Al Smith (16:10) for sixth. Defending champ John Trautmann of Monroe-Woodbury won the race in a course-record 15:37. The Section 5 boys were second to Section 11 (Suffolk County). Meanwhile, Section 5's girls easily won the Class A title over Section 2 (Albany), thanks to placing the Nos. 2 through 6 runners. Brighton freshman Rachel Hosmer (18:19) was second, Penfield seventh-grader Deresa Walters (18:27) third, Fairport junior Kim Trawitz (18:31) fourth, Webster junior Erika Schwarz (18:35) fifth and Penfield senior Rachel Korn (18:39) sixth. Webster was third in the team race. TU 11-11-85

Dear BUMBLEBEES,

Congratulations, on the state meet.

You now have to look ahead to the Federations Meet. The state meet may act as an "inflatuation of the mind" breaker, as the Eastern meet did for us last year. You can gain as much, or more, respect in winning Federations. Down state people (Long Islanders) consider Feds as the state meet because it is everyone, all classes of NYSPHSAA, CHSAA, NYSIS, PSAL, together so you can truly see who is truly the best team.

Some advice from people who have run there:

get out quick

the race is over at the 2 mile mark the last mile is downhill.

At the start you go out 500 yards then cross a bridge onto a path about 5 body widths wide. It inclines to the mile and half point - "cardiac hill" (L.I. only hill) just before the 2 mile mark. "Real steep, Killer" after that 1 mile left--move off the hill, you can catch literally at least 50 people.

I thing the general ideas are get out quick and stick together, know where each othe are. Don't get lost - places in the 70s and 80s don't help.

I wish you the best of luck. You are THE team, you can not live off the past teams repuation--"fat cat" attitudes.(you have your own rep.) The rest of the season means nothing now -- this is THE race.

Peace & Good luck

McQuaid Runners Lead Section 5

THE BRIGHTON-PITTSFORD POST NOV. 14, 1985

A second straight state championship eluded McQuaid Jesuit's cross-country Knights by a narrow margin last Saturday at SUNY Binghamton.

Top-rated in Section 5 and around the state, the Knights came up short by a 65-71 score against William Floyd High of Long Island's Section 11 in the Class A race. Monroe-Woodbury, the Section 9 team that McQuaid defeated by 31 points last year in winning its first state title was a close third this time with 79 and Longwood, the second Section 11 entry, was fourth with 81 in the 11-school field.

"We ran a solid team race, but our group was back just about 10 seconds too far," was Coach Bob Bradley's comment about his squad's near-miss. "Sure, we're disappointed, because we definitely could have won it. But any time you get all your scorers into the top 50 at the States, you can't feel that you ran a bad race. We're looking forward to having another crack at Floyd in the Federation meet."

That return match will occur this Saturday at Sunken Meadow State Park on Long Island, where the CHSAA (downstate Catholic schools), PSAL (New York City public schools), and private school association will join the NYSPHSAA schools in a 36-team season finale. On Saturday morning, McQuaid's Varsity-2 squad will also conclude its season in the annual Jesuit Schools Championship at New York's Van Cortland Park.

Senior tri-captain Scott Paterson is also looking ahead to his next test after suffering his first loss to a Section 5 opponent at Binghamton. Penfield senior Al Smith finished just ahead of Paterson as the two placed 6-7 to lead the sectional runners.

Sophomore Chris Cusack was the Knights' second man, taking 33rd, and behind him, in a 15-second block, came seniors Brian Mack (39) and George Schell (44), and junior Matt Smith (49), whose 17:08 clocking made him the fastest fifth man of the day. With the individuals pulled out of the team scoring, that left McQuaid with a 2-11-15-19-24 spread that didn't match Floyd's 4-8-12-16-25.

"Our two teams seem to be very equal," said Bradley. "It'll be interesting to see how it comes out in that big Federation field."

Section 5 Girls' Win States

THE BRIGHTON-PITTSFORD POST NOV. 14, 1985

The Section 5 girls' cross-country team unveiled its youth movement last Saturday at the New York State Intersectional Meet held at Binghamton State.

For the first time in the history of girls' participation in the States, Section 5 was a team winner. With Brighton freshman Rachel Hosmer leading the pack, the local runners finished in the second through sixth spots in the Class A race for large schools.

Denise Bushallow of Auburn from

Section Three won the race in a course record time of 18:00 for the 3.1 mile distance. Hosmer's time of 18:19 spearheaded a 20-second grouping, with Penfield's seventh-grade sensation, Deresa Walters, third in 18:27; Kim Trawitz, a junior from Fairport, the fourth finisher, in 18:31; Webster junior Erika Schwartz was clocked in 18:35 for fifth; and the only senior in the group, Rachel Korn, wearing the crimson-white of Penfield, was sixth in 18:39.

Monroe County chairman Dave

Henessey, Penfield coach, commented, "The girls did a fantastic job. Before the race, they got together and decided to try and stay together as a group. Boy, did they ever! Their 227 team points beat out Section 2, which had 289.

"We are taking dead aim on repeating as team champs again next year. Our top level of competition is shown when Patty VanderMallie from Spencerport, who finished sixth in the State Meet last year, couldn't qualify this year locally for the States."

□ CROSS COUNTRY runners Al Smith of Penfield and Scott Paterson of McQuaid lead local participants into tomorrow's New York State Public High School Athletic Association Federation Meet at Sunken Meadow Park on Long Island. The meet is the last of the season.

Smith and Paterson will be chasing two-time state champ John Trautmann of Monroe-Woodbury High, one of the best schoolboy runners in the country. Trautmann won last weekend's Class A state meet in Binghamton in a course-record 15:37.

Smith was Section 5's top finisher, sixth in 16:10. Paterson was seventh in 16:11. It was the first time Paterson, the Section 5 champ, lost to a local runner this year. W 11-15-85

Smith Leads

Local Runners

Brighton Pittsford Post 11-14-85

Al Smith led the local finishers in the State Boys' Cross-Country meet Saturday at Binghamton. Smith, from Penfield High School, led the Section 5 team in the Class A race with a sixth-place finish.

McQuaid's Scott Paterson finished seventh. Brighton's Mark Emmons finished 22nd, followed by Irondequoit's Eric Fillinger in 25th place, and Fairport's Mike Schultz in 27th place.

The remainder of the McQuaid scoring can be found in the McQuaid story.

Section 5 as a team finished second to Section 11.

CROSS COUNTRY AT A GLANCE

What — New York State Federation championships.

When — Tomorrow: Girls' team race at 1 p.m. Girls' individual at 1:30 p.m. Boys' team race at 2 p.m. Boys' individual at 2:30 p.m.

Where — Sunken Meadow State Park, Long Island.

Overview — The Public High Schools Athletic Association held its championships in Binghamton last weekend. The Federation meet will include some of the top teams and individuals from the NYSPHSAA as well as from Public Schools Athletic Association and the Catholic High Schools Athletic Association. Among the local participants are the boys' teams from McQuaid and Victor and the girls' teams from Webster and Victor. Individually, Penfield's Al Smith is the top boys' entrant. Brighton's Rachel Hosmer, Fairport's Kim Trawitz and Deresa Walters and Rachel Korn of Penfield are in the girls' field. DEC 11-15-85

HISTORY OF SUNKEN MEADOW STATE PARK
5,000 METER COURSE

Approximately 240,000 boys and girls have competed on the 5,000 meter course since it was first used in the St. Anthony's Invitational in 1977. There have been 32 Invitationals, 7 State Qualifiers, 2 Federation Meets, and 1 State Meet held on the course since its conception eight years ago.

During this eight year span only 15 boys have cracked the 16 minute barrier and only 16 girls have broken the 19 minute barrier. I would like to honor those individuals by listing their name and statistics below:

GIRLS

1.	Chris Curtin	Mephram	1981	18:07.5

Editors Note: Why did I add the last name?

Records are always interesting and gives the competition something to shoot at; so I am going to add the "CLASS" and "TEAM" records. You will note that two of the runners holding class records are running today:

TEAM RECORDS - 5,000 METERS

GIRLS - Mepham High School

19:44.9

This five runner average was set in the New York State Federation Meet held on November 15, 1981 by the following individuals:

Chris Curtin	18:07.5
Debbie Cuttitta	19:23.0
Cheryl Stibritz	19:56.0
Regina McKenna	20:26.0
Sue Nelson	20:55.0

BOYS - Glens Falls High School

16:30.4

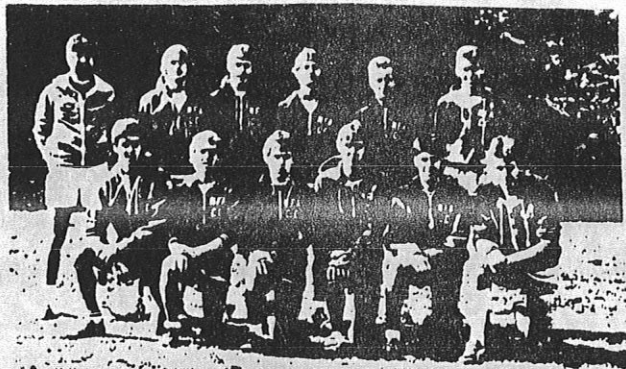

This five runner average was set in the New York State Federation Meet held on November 19, 1977 by the following individuals:

Jim O'Connell	15:49.0
Doug Gaulin	16:26.0
Chris Sommo	16:38.0
Brian O'Connell	16:39.0
George Clevenger	16:50.0

A "Class A" rated course with plenty of opportunity for spectator viewing. A 3/4 mile start with the last half mile run left to right around a pond, after turning through the gate at the end of the pond you turn left and proceed up a hill called "Cemetery" for a 1/4 of a mile, at the top you bear right and proceed back down the hill, turn left at the bottom and proceed along the path to the picnic area, follow the path through the picnic area in a clockwise direction for a 1/2 mile slight incline, this path will bring you back to where you entered the path and the base of "Cardiac Hill," proceed up "Cardiac Hill" turn right to the back meadow and the course will bring you back to the gate entering the pond (after you leave the top of the last hill the course is on a down hill grade back to the gate), enter the gate and follow the path 1/2 mile in a counter-clockwise direction back to the finish line. Everything but the back meadow is in full view of any spectator with enough stamina to run back and forth across the bridge.

Awards

McQuaid's Bob Bradley has been named the outstanding cross country coach of New York State by the National Federation of Interscholastic Coaches Association. Bradley guided the Knights back to the No. 1 spot in Section 5.

Runners honored by state

A number of area cross country runners were selected recently to the New York State Sports Writers Association's all-state team.

Topping the list was Queensbury's Jeff Dybas, who was chosen as a first-teamer along with Binghamton's Geoff Coco, Rob Colvin of Syracuse Nottingham, Kerry Fly of Lockport, Garden City's T.J.

McArdle, Scott Patterson of Rochester McQuaid, and John Trautmann of Monroe-Woodbury. Trautmann was selected as the state's Athlete of the Year.

Locally, on the fifth team was Greg Potter of Glens Falls, while teammate Loren Shipley was an honorable mention selection as was Jon Bordeau of Queensbury.

H.S. UPDATE

4 runners earn all-state honors in cross country

Democrat and Chronicle

Four Section 5 runners — including a seventh grader — were named by the New York State Sports Writers Association to the all-state cross country first team.

Named to the girls' first team were freshman Rachel Hosmer of Brighton, junior Erika Schwarz of Webster and seventh-grader Deresa Walters of Penfield. McQuaid's Scott Paterson made the boys' first team.

The other girls' first-team selections were Chris Burcross of Port Byron, Denise Bushallow of Auburn, Patty Weigand of Canastota, all from Section 3 (Syracuse area), and Jean Peterson of St. Agnes of the Catholic High School Athletic Association.

Seniors Rachel Korn of Penfield and Kim Trawitz of Fairport were named to the second team and junior Sue Parkhurst of Hilton was a fifth-team pick.

Hosmer finished second in the New York State Public High School Athletic Association meet and 17th in last Saturday's Kinney National finals. Schwarz won the New York State High School Federation title. Walters finished third in the NYSPHAA meet.

Paterson was the only boys' first-team pick from Section 5. Allen Smith of Penfield was named to the second team and Scott Knapp of Victor was named to the third team. Paterson finished fourth in the state federation meet, seventh in the NYS-PHAA meet and won six individual titles at invitationals. Smith finished sixth in the NYS-PHAA meet.

Other first-team members were Geoff Coco of Section 4 Binghams, Rob Colvin of Section 3's Nottingham, Jeff Dybas of Queensbury in Section 2 (Albany area), Kerry Fly of Section 6's Lockport, T.J. McArdle of Garden City in Section 8 (Nassau County), and John Trautmann of Monroe-Woodbury in Section 9.

Bushallow and Trautmann were named athletes of the year.

The 5th annual All-Section V Cross Country team, sponsored by the Greater Rochester Track Club, is determined by sectional and intersectional performances.

1985 was another great year for Section V Cross Country; the tradition continued with exceptional performances by many athletes, especially the returning runners. The 1985 Intersectional Meet saw the Girls Class A Sectional team win another State Championship (227-289 for Section 2) with an unprecedented finish order of 2nd (Rachel Hosmer, 9th grade); 3rd (Deresa Walters, 7th grade); 4th (Kim Trawitz, 11th); 5th (Erika Schwarz, 11th); 6th (Rachel Korn, 12th). In addition to an exceptional performance by the Class A Girls team (with the Webster Girls earning 3rd place in the team race), McQuaid's Varsity Boys placed second (with 71 points, to William Floyd's 65). Incidentally, McQuaid was the NYS #1 rated team through September and October. The Class A Boys Sectional Team placed 2nd with 238 points behind Section 11's 196. In Class B, the Victor Boys Team, behind Scott Knapp's great 3rd place finish, placed 3rd in the team race, 1 point behind Nottingham's 121 points. In other races, the Victor Girls placed 5th, as did the Sodus Girls in their respective Team Class Championships.

McQuaid Cross Country Invitational Open Race

The RIT River Road Running Club & the McQuaid Jesuit High School Alumni Association are joining together in an attempt to collect the complete results of the McQuaid Cross Country Invitational Open Races. The results obtained thus far will be listed on these pages. We gratefully accept changes, corrections and additional information with regards to the Open Race portion of the Invitational. Personal comments added to original result documents have been placed in italics. Send all corrections/info/questions to: Bill Quinlisk at billq@frontiernet.net

McQuaid Jesuit

McQuaid Jesuit High School, named for the first Catholic bishop of Rochester, the Most Reverend Bernard J. McQuaid, D.D., is a private, Jesuit college preparatory school for young men in grades 7 to 12. It is located at the southeast corner of Clinton Avenue and Elmwood Avenue in Brighton, a suburb of Rochester, NY. Ground was broken for the 32 acre campus on 23 June 1953, and the building was completed by September, 1955. The first class of McQuaid Jesuit (196 students) was admitted on 8 September 1954. That group of young men, together with the new first year class, started the school's second year in the new complex on 7 September 1955.

The First Invitational

The first McQuaid Cross Country Invitational was held in 1965. The races started and finished at the school's Brighton campus and partly ran through the streets. Fittingly, the very first Varsity Champion was McQuaid Athletic Hall-of-Famer, Eric Kendrick, who was undefeated in all of his Cross Country races that season. The McQuaid Invitational was the brain child of Bob Bradley, an English teacher at McQuaid, who also served as the Cross Country, Indoor and Outdoor Track Coach at the school. He founded the McQuaid Invitational back in 1965 because local schools did not have a competition planned for that weekend. Over the years, what began as a small series of races turned into one of the largest High School sponsored cross country meets in the nation. After only 3 years the McQuaid Invitational had outgrown the school's Brighton campus and area streets. In 1968 the McQuaid Invitational moved to the Henrietta campus of the Rochester Institute of Technology (R.I.T.) where it stayed for 5 years. In 1972 torrential rains and thousands of runners combined to tear up the athletic fields at RIT. In 1973 the McQuaid Invitational moved to a permanent home in Genesee Valley Park.

Coach Bob Bradley

According to McQuaid Alumnus, Michael Ansaldi, Bob Bradley's fondness of a Jesuit education began at St. Peter's Prep back in New Jersey. He recalls his own running career by quickly retorting, "I was one of the last people to finish the races." Upon graduation from St. Pete's, young Bradley entered the Marines and traveled to Korea. He praises his company commander for keeping him alive and out of combat. His memories of Korea were an incredibly enjoyable experience for growing and learning. After returning to the states, Bob attended Fordham University in New York. It is here where he recalls contemplating life as an English teacher. After skipping a test for one of his English classes, his professor spotted and questioned him. Bob responded honestly, saying he was unprepared for the test. The professor told Bob to have confidence in himself and gave him an oral exam on the subject. As Bob remembers, the professor stayed away from tough material and instead asked easy questions. It was at Fordham where Bob began to realize the importance of educators and their influence on the students. When Bob left Fordham for McQuaid Jesuit High School, it was from the advisement of a Jesuit teacher at Fordham. He felt a call to continue down the path of a Jesuit education. Upon arriving in Rochester, Bob quickly found himself immersed in the close knit McQuaid community. The young bachelor religiously attended mass, sporting events, and stayed after school to help his students. His freshman level classes read and studied Bob's favorite novel, J.D. Salinger's, The Catcher in the Rye. Bob used the book because "high school students can relate to and understand" its main character, Holden Caulfield. In customary fashion, a Jesuit friend came to the young teacher when the Cross Country team was in need of a coach after Terry Foley, McQuaid's first coach, left for Penfield High School. Bob decided to test his own endurance on the track that afternoon to see if he would be able to jog with the runners to Cobb's Hill, a destination approximately one and a half miles away. Upon completion of his own physical test, Bob Bradley became the coach of the Cross Country team.

With his life revolving around McQuaid, it is no surprise that Bob met his wife, Ann Marie, in the basement just down the hall from his office. They were introduced by Fr. O'Malley, S.J., who is well known for his performance in the movie The Exorcist. The two married in August of 1968. Their three children and numerous grandchildren have grown up under the principles that Bob has devoted to his career, students and family.

Recalling the early years with Bob brought back memories of Diocesan championship meets with tight scores between rival Catholic schools. Bob remembers the details of races as if they just occurred. Today when runners approach the now retired coach, they always leave shocked at the phenomenal memory and ever vibrant and engaging personality. Bob is quick to mention the stunning races of the likes of greats like Erik Kendrick, Peter Glavin, Chris Horton, and Brad Sumner. The countless stories of spectacular finishes, numerous championships, and record-breaking performances are understandable for a coach to recall. However, Bob Bradley is just as quick to recant stories of runners who never gave up even with a lack of natural talent. They push themselves to remarkable things and often times are the difference makers on teams, he states. These are the runners that are there every day of practice, every meet (even if they aren't racing), and turn themselves into 'new runners' over the summer, fueled by a drive to make a difference. Cross-country is considered by most as the prize season of high school distance running. According to Bob, "Cross-country is pure. You need five runners to sacrifice to make a championship team. It is not just one individual who can win a race for the team." Bradley encouraged all students who were not involved with other teams to come out and learn the beauty and fun of running. This encouragement led to some great runners coming out and stepping up to complete a team.

When reflecting on his legacy, many recall Bob's coaching accolades. However, his pride for the McQuaid education meant that excellence off the field was most important on the team. Commitment to faith was never forgotten, with the teams praying before every race and going to masses each season. Also, at award ceremonies the 'Vince Lombardi Award' is given to the team member who shows a commitment to faith, team, and sport. Bob will also attend funerals to show support for students and alumni who face the death of a loved one. The most important part of his career was his position as a provider of opportunity. Bob would say about his athletes "[he] was just driving, they had to race". Bob Bradley would always make sure his teams had the opportunity to race against the best talent they were capable of competing with. This played a role in his constant drive to improve and expand the McQuaid Invitational into, what one runner remarked, "the Woodstock of Cross-country races." He provided opportunity to city school runners by directing and organizing the City-Catholic league for years. He also helped to organize the first Rochester Indoor Track League. He is a constant advocate for many people in need of help.

Bob is truly a 'salt of the earth' type of person. When discussing the success of Bob's career one should not forget it is the product of a life spent serving others. Bob's devotion to his profession, values and faith has enabled him to make a mark on the world, especially in McQuaid and the Rochester running community. He is, quite simply, an inspiring and remarkable person. If you're at the McQuaid Invitational, stop by and say "hello" to Bob – he's the man in the middle of the chaos still serving as race announcer.

The sun beat down upon the five men. Of the five, four were runners with the fifth being an old washed up track coach. The five of them were standing around talking while they waited for the next race of the meet to start.

"So, Scott, how's your car been treating you?" the track coach asked.

Scott's car was a beat up old Volkswagen Beetle that was painted the school colors. The school colors were black and gold and Scott had used them when he touched up the car's paint after he bought it. He had painted the car so that it looked like a giant bee with its black and gold stripes in the same order as the ones on his track teams uniforms. The car was always falling apart and wouldn't have looked out of place in a junkyard. Despite all this, everyone loved his car.

"Oh, didn't I tell you?" Scott jokingly asked, "I sold it to a friend of mine for fifty bucks and bought a new 380 psi.

Everyone laughed at this one, except for the youngest man among them. He was a sort of passive guy that never really felt like he belonged. He always felt separated from the rest of the group by some unseen barrier and was seldom comfortable around people. He simply watched painfully as Scott told about his new car. That car had meant a lot to the passive wimp and he wanted to know why Scott got rid of it. When Scott had finished, the youngest man spoke up.

"You really got rid of your car Scott?" the youngest man asked sheepishly. "Why?"

Scott looked over at the younger runner with a grin on his face and said, almost seriously, "Because I didn't like the color."

Everyone laughed this time and Scott excused himself saying that he was going for a jog. The youngest runner, slightly confused, made his exit and headed for the parking lot. He wanted to check the car. To make sure it was still there. It was!

It was three weeks later. The track meet had long since ended and with it had gone the track season and school. It was 3:00 am and the young man lay in bed thinking. He was thinking about three weeks earlier when Scott had joked about getting rid of his car.

"How could Scott joke about getting rid of his car?" he asked himself. If he saw that car on the road, he saw it as more than just a doctored up junkpile. To him, the car was more than just a car. It was a symbol. It stood for the outrageous school spirit that everyone had. For the pride he had in his running, his school, and himself. It stood for every reason he went to the school he did. Even if he didn't always show these qualities himself. He knew that other runners felt the same way about the car as he did and would hate to see it go. He wondered how Scott could ever dump all this for a quick buck. "Scott couldn't simply get rid of the car," he said, trying to console himself. "Someone would stop him! Yes, someone would have to stop him. Someone with the leadership qualities that Scott had. Someone that would be willing to fix up and then drive around a giant black and yellow bee. Yes, someone would take charge, but who? He started making up a list of candidates in his head. How about Mike Honch? No, that was impossible. Mike Honch was not the type of kid someone could look up to. He couldn't give a shit about anything except his army boots and his rock group that sung about dead fetuses. All right then, what about Matt Smith? He had to have been kidding himself. Matt Smith was the classic mooch. He would eat, borrow, or simply take whatever he didn't have to pay for. That was not the ideal person for this task. Two down, seven to go. The Cusacks wouldn't be that bad for the job. You could look up to them and they were both good runners. Besides, the older Cusack was going to be this years team captain. Nope it just wouldn't work. First of all, neither of them would ever go for the idea and, second of all, neither of them needed, or could afford, a car. He went down the list of names and mentally crossed off each one. Lavalley? Not his style. What about Dovi or Adin? Impossible! Neither of them would find it logical to drive around a gas guzzling, rusted out, piece of shit that had trouble making it up to thirty-five miles per hour, going down a hill. That left only Tim Hess and Jeff Stone. Tim was out of the question. He had too many problems, already. His parents were constantly on his back for either his grades or simply life in general. They wanted him to look a certain way, eat a certain way, and sit a certain way. With all this in front of him, there was no way he could buy the car. Besides, his parents had stashed away an old MG sports car for him for when they thought that he had lived up to their expectations enough to deserve it. That left Jeff Stone. Jeff had all the qualities needed for the task of owning the car. He had leadership qualities somewhat like Scott's and wasn't afraid to stick his neck out for something he believed in. There, of course, was a problem. Jeff already had a car. His parents had also stashed away an old MG sports car for him for when he was old enough and mature enough to own a car of his own. From the looks of things, he would be getting his car sometime during the summer, making it ridiculous for him to buy another car with the MG on its way. That was it. There was nobody else to consider, and nobody to take on the car. He had eagerly gone through them all hoping to get at least a possible candidate. Instead, he came out empty handed. Where was he going to find someone to take on the responsibility of the car." With this question on his mind, he fell asleep.

Days passed and the young man's time was taken up by more important things like running, baseball, and girls. He didn't have time to think until he was injured in a baseball game. The doctor said he would be layed up for two to three weeks and shouldn't be allowed to run or play baseball during this time. As he lay awake that night, his mind drifted back to the car and its predicament.

"Who would be able to take on that God damned car?" he calmly asked himself. "Not a person on the team could do it. Nobody! Not a one! Zilcho! What was he supposed to do? Who was willing to take on the responsibility of the car? Who had the leadership qualities and the guts to use them? Who was not afraid to stand up for the car? ...for all it symbolized and meant? Who? Who? WHO... He asked himself that question so many times that he began to feel like an owl. Then, suddenly, it hit him. He could do it! He was the one willing to take charge. Hadn't he done this when he had started to try and find a way to keep Scott's car and all it stood for from being lost. Yes! He had the knowhow to fix up the car and the team. It would be the first step towards becoming the much needed leader. It was him that the team needed. Thoughts swept through his mind faster than he could use them. It was time for him to break out of his protective shell and face the world. It was time for him to take charge. For him to stick his neck out for what he beleived in. No more passive wimp. He had played that role for too long. Leaving everything up to someone else while he sat back and watched. Now it was time for him to forge his own way. To become the person that he knew he had inside of him.. It was time he let his parents, his friends, and especially himself, know that there was more to him than that wimp they knew so well. He had ideas, guts, and knowhow and nothing was going to get in his way. It was time to get his life together. To make his ideas reality. To be the best God damned leader that the team ever had. It was time to step out of line and set a new course." By the time the young man had come to this conclusion, he was exhausted, and fell into a deep sleep.

It was the next morning. The sun streamed in through the window, adding a lustre to the otherwise dull room. The boy awoke and lay in bed stairing at the wall. Then, suddenly, everything from the night before hit him. He began to have doubts and started to ask himself questions that he knew he couldn't really answer.

"How was he ever going to explain to his parents the change that had taken place? How could he tell them that he was ready to take charge of his life and team? It just wouldn't work. They would simply laugh off whatever he said and go back to their monotonous activities. Not only would they laugh at him when he tried to explain the new person he had become, they would also go into uncontrollable hysterics when he tried to tell them about the car. To them, it would just be another ploy to get a car. They would never let him own a car or even understand his reasons for wanting this particular car. They had become too conditioned by the world to understand anything that wasn't logical. They had forgotten that the way a person thought was not necessarily logical. That people could do things for other reasons than those that were looked upon as correct by society. They had forgotten that people were individuals with individual thoughts, ideas and reasons. They had forgotten that just because a person looked at the picture of life from a different angle he wasn't necessarily wrong. To them, a car was a mode of transportation. It was something that must have good gas mileage and be fairly cheap to keep running. They saw nothing of what he saw in a car. To him, there was more to a car than whether its monthly bill was more than what Consumer Reports said was correct. It was a way to break out of his shell. To step out of line and take a different path than the rest. To be a leader for a change instead of a passive wimp. He was no longer content with his life. He felt as though he was rotting away like the people in Mt. Hope cemetery. He felt unclean. Was the world really so bad that he could be controlled by people that didn't seem to understand him? What could he do? To his parents and all the other grownups in society, it just wasn't logical, or correct, for him to step out of line. To take his own self-made path. He wasn't supposed to be ready yet. He didn't understand the real world, yet so he couldn't be ready to decide his own fate. He had to be conditioned first by his parents. They were supposed to teach him that he couldn't always have what he wanted. That he couldn't simply go for something he longed for or even needed if it was against societies wishes. He hadn't learned that societies reasons were always correct when it came to a decision, and trying to prove them wrong was like pissing in the wind. You can't win. With all this on his mind, he got out of bed, got dressed, and went to find his mother.

"Mom!" he yelled, "Mom, where are you?"

He heard the downstairs toilet flush and then muffled obscenities being yelled out to the world in general. He had caught his Mom at a bad time. His brother had used the toilet again. Everytime his brother used the toilet, it got stuck up. No matter how many times his mother yelled at his brother, his brother always clogged the toilet up. His father said that it was the food that his brother ate but he knew better. What would really happen was his brother would take the newspaper into the bathroom and read it. When he was done with the toilet and the paper, he would crumple the paper into a ball and shove it into the toilet. The newspaper would be sucked down the pipe easily enough but would lodge itself a few inches from sight. By the time the newspaper had completely stopped up the toilet, there was no trace of it or his brother's previous presence. The refuse had been sucked down the pipe and the only trace of his brother left in the room was his distinct odor. The bowl would fill up and await its next victim. This morning it had been his mother. He guessed that his mother had probably used the bathroom without thinking. When she was done, she would have flushed the toilet as usual and been well into washing her hands before the problems began to arise. The toilet would usually overflow, spilling refuse, and whatever else was floating around in the toilet, all over the bathroom floor. After this first wave of flooding was over, the toilet would overflow a second time instead of refilling the already full bowl. If his guess was correct, his mother was standing ankle deep in shit before she knew what was happening. Now, was, definitely, not the time to talk to her. So, instead of reaping the benefits of his mother's ill fortune, the young man split, deciding that the backyard was a much more suitable place for the newborn leader.

At a much later time that day, the young man returned to his search for his mother. He decided that the house was the best place to look for his mother and began the search there. As he entered the house, he spied a note on the kitchen table. It read;

John,
I went to pick up your father at work. Dinner is at five o'clock. When your brother gets home, tell him not to go anywhere.

Love Mom

He looked over the note for any hint as to his mother's mood. Everything in the letter seemed plain enough to him, except for the "Love Mom". What did she mean by that? Was it a trap? Was she trying to lure him into a false sense of security so that she could catch him with his defenses down. He started to break out into a cold sweat. "What the hell are you babbling about, you dumb shit?" he asked himself as he stood there looking at the note. "Mom always signs her notes "Love Mom." So what the hell are you worrying about?" He started to feel dumb and foolish and needed something to keep him occupied until his parents got home. He began to clean up the kitchen. By the time he heard the familiar car in the driveway, he had cleaned up the kitchen and was about to take out the garbage. As he picked up one of the many bags that had accumulated, his father walked in. His father supported the family. He worked from nine to five in a big, comfortable, office that was complete with wood paneling and degrees on the walls. He was a lawyer, one of the best. He knew his job well and people often came to him for advice and answers to their problems. As a father, though, he was a little bit rusty. To the young man, his father seemed to lack compassion for his family. If someone was hurt, his father always seemed awkward saying something other than "Put ice on it." His father had spent the bulk of his life working, studying, and surviving, and had lost the qualities that made him human. He was slowly turning in to a machine.

If he had a choice between work or being with his family, he chose work. Life was no longer something that his father could enjoy. It was something to survive. His father had lost the ability to simply stop work, go home, and spend some time with his family. His father no longer knew his family and was on his way to becoming one of the many living machines that inhabit the earth. Yes, that was his father. A man that had lost all that had made him human. The young man watched as his father went to the refrigerator, grabbed a beer, and sat down at the kitchen table. After a few minutes, his father realized that he was home and looked up to see what was going on. The young man looked over at his dad and said, almost apologetically, "Hi Dad. How was your day?" The young man's father answered with a simple "fine" and then just sat there feeling awkward. The young man talked to his father for a while and was able to get a few grunts out of him. After a few minutes of this, the young man gave up and let his father alone. His dad quickly became preoccupied with his beer, cigarettes, and other problems, leaving the young man a chance to finish up taking out the garbage.

When he had finished taking out the garbage and was well into setting the table, his mother walked in. She was frowning. She was pissed off at something. She was always pissed off at something. She was always frowning. She always looked worried and always had a million and one things on her mind. It was as though she had never had anything nice happen to her. She never seemed to get things the easy way. She hardly ever smiled anymore. The young man knew that she had a colorful past.

She had told him about her younger days when she was a free spirited, fun loving college girl. If everything she told him about was true, then she had gotten into more mischief and had more fun than was deemed proper by society in her day. Those days she held close to her heart and wouldn't give up for anything. Now, she was supposed to be the middle aged housewife that drove a car pool once a week and cleaned up after the kids. Maybe, it was because she was thrown into the responsibility of running a family before she was ready or maybe she just felt left out, tied down, cheated. It might even have been that she thought she couldn't handle the world she once knew. He didn't really know why but his mother always carried frown.

"Hi Mom." the young man said.

"Hello." she sighed as she walked into the kitchen. At first, she simply looked around the room in a forlorn sort of way. Then, the fact that it was clean sunk in. The table was set, the garbage was taken out, and the dinner was in the oven. All she had to do was sit down and wait for the buzzer on the stove to go off. The young man watched as relief spread over his mother's face like wildfire and some of the worry lines in her face became a little less noticeable. She sat down at the table and simply stared in disbelief at the room. For a moment, she returned to that care free, fun loving, college girl. Then, the doorbell rang, the buzzer on the stove went off, and the young man's brother got home.

The young man ran to get the door as his mother shut the buzzer on the stove off and confronted his brother. By the time he got the front door open, his mother had launched herself, in her full fury, at his brother. As he opened the door, the young man heard muffled shouts and screams followed by the breaking of glass and loud grunts. He looked outside to see a large, burly, man, that was wearing a big, brown, trenchcoat and was carrying a sign that said, "I've got a balloon for you," run across the lawn. Not knowing what to do or, even who the balloon man was, the young man shut the door and headed back to the kitchen. As he walked through the hall, towards the kitchen, he realized that the torrent of shouts had stopped and all was quiet. He stepped into the kitchen and looked tentatively around. His brother was sitting at the table reading the paper. The young man's mother was taking the food out of the oven. His sister was bouncing around the room and his father was studying a cigarette.

"Mom, let me give you a hand with that." the young man said,

His Mom was upset now and looked as though she would kill anyone or anything that bothered her. She turned and glared at the young man who promptly sat down. As dinner was set upon the table, the boy began to think.

"What are you doing?" he asked himself. "This isn't how leaders act! How many good leaders do you know that don't have a backbone? None! They aren't afraid to stand up for what is right. They aren't afraid to stand up for something that they believe in. You didn't think that your mother should be serving dinner but you didn't do anything about it. A leader would have simply brushed by his mother and finished serving the dinner. Did you do that? No! You succumbed to authority even though you didn't agree with it. If you're going to be a leader, act like one!"

By the time the young man had finished bitching himself out, his dinner was cold and his broccoli was moldy. He decided that, as a leader, and a new person, he should redeem himself by starting up a conversation. He tried his mother first by asking her about her day.

"How was your day Mom?" the young man asked.

His mother didn't even acknowledge his presence. This was a blow to him but he had to roll with the punches. Next, he tried his brother.

"So, George, how was your day?" he asked.

There was no answer. His brother was not responding. He took another shot at it and was rewarded for his efforts. His brother grunted. He was getting desperate. He began to worry. He was not taking charge of the situation. He needed something fast. An impetus. But what? Then it came to him. He would use his sister. She would liven things up. She loved to talk because she could go for hours on the phone without a break. "Well here it goes." he mumbled under his breath, "Jennifer, how was your day?" As soon as he had asked the question, he knew that he had done the wrong thing. Asking her a question was like setting off a bomb. She just exploded. Words flew out of her mouth faster than his sophisticated mind could comprehend them. He listened to his sister go on and on in her sixth grade gibberish. The words flew from her mouth so fast, she could have put an auctioneer to shame. The only things that he could decipher were phrases that sounded something like

"OhmyGod" and "yaknowwhat." Life looked hopeless for the young man.

After his sister had stopped spouting at the mouth, the dinner ended and everyone left to do his own thing. When he had cleaned up the kitchen a little bit, the young man went to find his parents. He found them in the living room reading a couple of books. He sat down in one of the chairs and looked at his parents. He wondered if they would listen to him. He wondered if they would understand him. Would they laugh at him or simply ignore him? He didn't know but as he sat there and looked at them, he knew it was hopeless. These were his parents, the authority. There was no way that they would let him own a car or even break out of his shell. They wouldn't understand him. They were too conditioned by society. They had grown up too much. He looked at his parents. Afraid to speak. Not knowing what to do. Then, as all good leaders must do, he went against the odds. He knew that it was hopeless but still kept the faith. He took the good little boy approach making his voice sound so sweet and so innocent, they just couldn't turn him down.

"Mom, Dad, can I talk to you for a second?" he asked in a voice so sweet and innocent it made him sick. Both parents grunted a yes and the young man continued speaking. He told his parents about the change that had taken place. He told them about the new person in him. The one with leadership qualities and the courage to go against the grain. He told them about how he was ready to step out of line and set his own course.

... about how he was willing to take on responsibility, for both his team and himself. He explained to them that he was ready to break out of his shell and that he needed to in order to survive. By the time the young man was done he had exposed the new him and everything that went with it. After he had done all this, the young man asked the question that could change his life.

"Mom, Dad, can I buy a car?" he asked tentatively.

Neither of his parents said no. There was a cloud of silence hanging over the room and he didn't know whether to break through it or not. As he sat there agonizing over the decision, his father spoke, saying one of those brilliant things dad's always say at the wrong time.

"I'm sorry son. I missed the question."

By now the young man was dying. He was so wound up. He felt like standing up and screaming the question into his father's face. When he replied, the young man had to fight all his impulses. He looked his father squarely in the eye and said, "I want to buy Scott's car!"

His father looked back at him with those machine-like eyes and replied, "No!" The young man's mother had also been listening and put in her "No."

The young man, not wanting to give up everything he was fighting for asked, "Why not?" He knew what his mother's reply would be but wanted to see what his father could dig up. His mother replied first with a "because I said no" and his father hung back, not wanting to get into the subject. The young man turned to his father and said, "Well Dad, what's your reason for not letting me buy Scott's car?" His father began to attack the practical side.

"You can't afford it anyway, son. Cars are very expensive to keep running these days. There is insurance, gas, tune ups, inspections and multiple other expensive things that go with it, to pay for. Where are you going to get the money to pay for all that. Your mother and I are certainly not going to help pay for a deathtrap like Scott's car so that you can drive it around looking like an idiot." His father finished speaking and went back to reading his book, assuming that the issue was closed. The young man knew, however, that it had just begun to warm up. He countered everything that his father had said.

"Dad," the young man said. "first of all, I want you to know that I have taken all this into consideration, already. You said insurance, tune ups, and inspections. I have enough money in the bank to pay for the insurance. The car has already been inspected this year and it doesn't run well enough to bother with a tuneup. As for the gas, I have a summer job right now which will easily pay for the gas during the summer and a good portion of the school year, not to mention the huge sums that I have stashed away for a rainy day. You also mentioned other expensive things, meaning repairs. The money for the repairs will come out of my bank account. There shouldn't be many problems but if there are, I can cover them. There are two very important things that you left out. One of them is the money that it will cost to fix the car up. I have taken care of this by putting my money in the bank. My interest alone, should cover any home repairs needed. If it doesn't, I'm sure that I can scrape up a few extra dollars somewhere. The other important thing that you forgot was the money that the car itself cost. Don't worry about that, I have enough. The car isn't worth that much, even though it has a new engine, and is a long way from being out of my price range." As he finished, he looked at his parents to see what they thought. They both looked a little bit bored, almost as if they had been through this all before, and neither of them seemed ready to reply. After a few minutes, however, his mother spoke up.

"The answer is no!" she said in a voice so final and so foreboding, it scared him. "Too many young people are getting killed lately. Seven kids your age in the last two weeks. Do you want to end up in a coffin? You know how these things happen in threes. Do you want to be the third accident? Do you want your parents to have to bury you before your time? Don't you know that cars are not toys? Can't you see that cars are dangerous?"

Before he could reply, his father joined in. "Even if you don't see your mother's side, there is a lot of responsibility when it comes to owning a car."

That was the last straw. The young man was broken. He realized then that his parents hadn't heard, or understood, a word that he had said. They couldn't. They were just too far taken by society. They couldn't be reasoned with. It was like trying to reason with a brick wall, it was impossible. Knowing that he was defeated, the young man excused himself and went up to his room. As he left, his parents went back to reading,

When he was in his room, the young man sat down on his bed. He was confused, upset, suicidal. Was the world so bad that there was no hope for him left. Were his parents so engulfed by it that they couldn't understand him. Would he be forced to be a passive wimp all his life? Would he ever be able to become the much needed leader? These questions flew through his mind as he sat there on his bed. If he couldn't break out of his shell then, was life worth living? He couldn't take much more. He was going to explode. He was going to lose his mind. He picked up his typewriter to throw it against the wall. As he lifted it up over his head, he felt a sharp pain cut through his side. He had forgotten about his injury. It hadn't hurt him in so long. He gasped and then fell to the ground with the typewriter landing on top of him. As he sat there in a daze, he looked at his typewriter. It had taken the fall well and looked none the worse for wear. He looked at it, not as a machine but as a way to vent his anger. It was a way to let the world know how he felt and to help his parents understand him. He looked at the typewriter in a way that he had never looked at it before. He quickly got up and put the typewriter on his desk. He put a piece of paper in the roller and began to type. He typed about all that had happened to him. He typed about all the changes that had taken place and the new person in him. He explained his reasons for doing things and revealed how he thought. He told everyone why he wanted Scott's car and his reasons for wanting to break out of his shell. He typed on and on, going through paper faster than he could thread it through the roller. Everything became a blur. He held nothing back and let everything just pour out of him. It all went down on paper as he typed. He typed all night without a break, never slowing down. Just as the first rays of dawn streamed through the window, he finished. The young man was exhausted. He stood up from the desk and looked at his work. It was twenty pages of thought, feeling, ideas, triumph, failure, and pain. It was his life. After he had stared at the messy pile of paper for a while, the young man went to bed. Just as his head hit the pillow, he fell asleep. The young man slept better than he had ever slept before in his life.

When he awoke the next day, the young man lay in bed feeling refreshed. He felt like he was ready to take on the world again. He got out of bed and went over to his desk in order to retrieve his papers. He looked at the bare desk top and did a double take. His papers were gone. He knew that he had left them sitting on top of the desk but now, they were nowhere to be seen. He figured that his brother had taken them so he ran downstairs to find his brother before he had stuffed them down the toilet. The young man searched the whole downstairs but couldn't find anyone. He figured that his brother had probably gone outside and that it would be best to look there for him. As he was putting on his shoes to go outside, the young man looked out the window. There, standing in the driveway, was the VW bug. The car that he had wanted and needed. The very same one he had agonized over and fought for. He pinched himself to make sure that he wasn't dreaming and then ran outside.

As he got closer to the car, he realized that his parents were standing next to it, looking as though they had created a monster. He ran up to them and stared speechless into their faces. His parents looked different. His mother was wearing a smile and his father's face actually showed some compassion. Their eyes told him that he had their approval and he turned to look at the car. The rear fenders were falling off and the tail light was altogether gone. The doors were rusted out and the driver's seat had fallen over. The young man looked at the car, seeing none of this. All that he saw was what the car stood for. A sense of pride filled him and he felt like the leader he had set out to become. Finally, his chance to lead his own way was granted to him. He felt as if he could accomplish everything he set out to do. It was time to break out of his shell, no more passive wimp. The young man's father looked over his son's shoulder and asked, "Well son, was it worth it?"

The young man stood there looking at the beat up, old, VW bug that was painted to look like a giant bee, and replied, "YES!!!"
