

Locals at home in 800

By Dom Amore
Special to the Register

Local athletes didn't have many chances to star this weekend at the Yale Invitational Indoor Track Meet at Coxe Cage, but when the 800-meter run came around late Saturday afternoon, Connecticut's top runners proved they could stand up to runners from New York and New Jersey.

Three of the top six in the close 800 competition were from the state with Bernie Radomski of Bloomfield coming in second with an outstanding time of 1:57.58, Mike Remigino of Northwest Catholic fifth at 1:58.93 and Mike Lewis of Cheshire sixth at 1:59.29.

"For all three to come in under 2:00, that is an outstanding race," said Cheshire coach Ron McReavy. "It's too bad they weren't all in the same heat, or Mike (Lewis) might have done much better."

Lewis, the English-born Cheshire senior, was the runaway winner of his heat and missed by .36 seconds of beating out Remigino for the last medal. The others, along with Norman McHugh of Stamford Westhill, ran in the seeded race. St. Clair Blackman of Prospect Heights, N.Y., won the gold with 1:56.56.

Coming into the meet, there was a lot of talk about Remigino, whose father Lindy won two gold medals in the 1956 Olympics. The younger Remigino, just a sophomore, figured that one day this race will be his.

"I was happy with the time," he said, "but I think I can finish first in this event before I graduate. This is the toughest competition I have faced."

Radomski was the dark horse of sorts. He missed the last state championships with an illness and his placement in the seeded race was something of a surprise. When the gun went off, he immediately dropped to the rear of the pack, running seventh after 200 meters. Then he dug into Coxe's famous "tuned track" and was through the last turn at 1:50. He made a move on Blackman, but the New Yorker was a little too far in front and the Bloomfield senior had to settle for a silver medal and Connecticut's unofficial bragging rights.

Emphasis placed on participation, not on winning

Indoor track motivator with non-scoring meets

By Gary Fallesen

Democrat and Chronicle

Lost, at times, in the must-win mentality of athletics is the No. 1 reason for high school sports: To encourage participation of as many students as possible.

That is the objective of indoor track and field.

"We don't like to call them developmental meets, but they are non-scoring," Section 5 coordinator Dave Hennessey said recently. "They allow athletes to try and test other events. It's a more relaxed type of atmosphere. But the kids are still trying to give their best."

Winning is secondary at the indoor track meets, like this recent meet at UR, where participation is encouraged from students with a wide variety of athletic abilities.

in the Rochester Winter Track Association. They compete in nine regular-season meets (from mid-December through February), and the Section 5 championship on March 2 at the University of Rochester. Section 5 also attends the state championships, which are to be run in conjunction with the NCAA indoor championships March 9 at the Carrier Dome in Syracuse.

Hennessey said that between 400 and 500 athletes attend each meet during the season. Races are run in three classes — varsity, varsity 'B,' and modified (for grades 7-9).

"Each of the athletes is able to compete with someone of his or her own ability," he said. "Here they go in and have a chance to improve."

"To a certain degree it is preparation for the outdoor season," said Hennessey, the indoor and outdoor track coach at Penfield. "But you won't see anyone who wins the indoor sectionals willing to give back their trophies or patches."

"It gives a lot of kids who might not play a winter sport something to do," he added. "A lot of distance kids, for instance, wouldn't necessarily be doing a winter sport if it weren't for indoor track. It's constructive training. A good distance runner might go out and do his road work, but this keeps them sharp. They stay competitive."

Hennessey said indoor track also allows a coach "more time to work with the kids in specialty events — like hurdles."

The 40-meter hurdles is one of 11 track events. The others are the 45 dash, the 300 dash, the 600, the 1,000, the girls' 1,500, boys' 1,600, the girls' 3,000, boys' 3,200, the girls' 1,500 race walk, boys' 1,600 race walk and three relays (4 by 1 207-meter lap, 4 by 2 laps and 4 by 4 laps). There also are five field events — the shot put, high jump, long jump, girls' triple jump, and boys' pole vault.

"Indoor track is a season in itself," said Hennessey, who has been the 19-year-old sports' coordinator since 1979. "There are lots of people who were great indoors, but weren't so good outdoors. A kid might be great in the 600 (indoors), but not as good in the 400 or 800 (outdoors)."

Stacy Prey of Brighton is equally impressive indoors and out.

"It's like a different season for me," the area's premier distance runner said. "It gets you prepared for spring, but it is a different sport. For one thing, there are no weather conditions to deal with."

Prey is a fourth-year indoor track participant. She was a state runner-up indoors last year in the 3,000. She then went on to All-America honors outdoors by finishing second in the state in the 1,500 and 3,000.

Prey, a senior who won the state's championship and earned All-America recognition in cross country in the fall, will be running the mile tomorrow at the prestigious Milrose Games at Madison Square Garden in New York City.

She said that the non-scoring approach of indoor track "takes a little of the pressure off."

"Everyone gets to run," said Prey, "and they get to try different events. That's great."

Participants also are permitted to enter only two events per meet indoors (as opposed to four in outdoor meets). That gives an athlete more time to watch his or her fellow competitors.

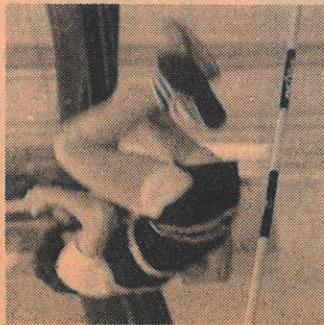

"I just sit there and watch all the events when I'm not running," said Prey. "Outdoors is so spread out you can't see much."

When Prey isn't running the events she dominates — the 1,000 (season best time of 2:58.6), 1,500 (4:37.9) and 3,000 (9:49.1) — she can sit back and observe state outdoor sprint champion Lisa Horton of East in the 45 (:05.9) and 300 (:42.2), or McQuaid's David Warth in the 1,000 (2:32.1) and 1,600 (4:24.2), or Penfield's Sam Reynolds in the pole vault (season best height of 13 feet, 3 inches).

Silly Runners

by Keith Boeck
and Chris McGuire

They run for the honors, the awards, the recognition, and the patches, but the McQuaid Indoor Track team runs mostly for the enjoyment, personal satisfaction and the challenge.

Senior Andrey Kushnir.

"I run for the enjoyment, the pain, the colds" said senior Robbie Smillie "and also for the sledding", he added. The Track team occasionally runs up Cobbs Hill Reservoir and instead of running down, they slid down the hill on their nylon running pants. It's a quick and easy way to get down the hill (and ruin an expensive pair of pants).

"I run because its a good feeling to know you're in good shape," said junior Scott Patterson. "Also it feels great when you stop."

Dave Warth likes the "satisfaction of a job well done and the awards and publicity."

Patterson, Warth, and Smillie all like the fact that they get blue and white sectional patches to "decorate" their white McQuaid jackets.

Warth, Rapp, Smillie and Patterson will be running the distance events this year (100m, 1600m, 3200m) and occasionally they will be dropping down to run the 800m. They are all members of the reigning State Champion Cross Country team, and they plan on continuing their winning ways. Backing up these four will be sophomores Conor Cusack and Marc Lavallee.

McGuire and Wilmot will once again be racing against the city sprinters in the 45m, 300m, and 600m. They will get support in the relays from juniors Mark Hendrie, Matt Dass, John Dice, Marc Shraml, Joe DiMaria, and Jim Terrell.

Seniors Paul Lloyd and junior Joe Noga will compete in the shot put. Both of them have a good chance of scoring sectional points.

The coach for this talented ladden-sledding team is, of course, Mr. Bill Quinlisk. In Mr. Quinlisk's words, "This team is talented. This year we have the first place strength that we were missing in the past years."
